

Marine Fisheries

REVIEW

On the cover:
Spencer F. Baird surrounded by several of the major achievements in fisheries research and development attributed directly to his guidance as the Nation's first Commissioner of Fisheries.

The Albatross,
the world's first vessel
designed and built specifically for marine research.

The Baird Hatchery,
the first Federal fish hatchery,
on California's McCloud River.

The Grampus,
the very successful New England schooner designed as a prototype for safer fishing vessels.

"Old Main,"
the first Federal laboratory
for marine research, at Woods Hole, Massachusetts.

A "fish car,"
for transporting eggs
and fry across the nation by railroad to stock lakes,
streams, and rivers.
